The ocean is vital for Coast Salish communities, and many have ceremonies and cultural practices surrounding the ocean and sea life. The Squamish Nation, for example, holds an annual Honouring the Salmon Ceremony to thank the fish and pray for their annual return. Fish leather was used for items such as shoes, pouches, as well as for decorations. Our Indigenous Cultural Programmer, Nicole, will lead this workshop on making your very own fish leather wallet. Nicole is a member of the Squamish Nation and practices a variety of traditional indigenous material crafts.
