Help us celebrate the library's 100th birthday this year with the creation of a community cookbook. This project invites people of all ages, cultural backgrounds and cooking abilities to share their culinary heritage and the story behind family recipes.

We hope to see recipes that span generations and continents, from treasured family recipes to modern creations, and include personal stories and shared memories of preparing a dish and sharing it with loved ones. The cookbook will be available in late 2024.

This collaborative project emerged from previous iterations of the library's community cookbook programs. If you submitted a recipe in a previous year, and gave us your contact information, we'll reach out to see if you want to be included.

Please submit your recipe and story by Monday, Sept. 16 to be included in this community project. You will be entered into a draw to win a cookbook!
